Cleveland State eyes cuts:

CLEVELAND — Cleveland State University said Wednesday it will cut more than $12 million and 225 positions from its budget as it struggles to meet cuts in state education assistance.

The three-step plan calls for a 7 percent tuition increase beginning in the fall quarter and immediate spending cuts of $4.1 million. Additional spending cuts of $4.1 million and $4 million would occur in the summer and fall quarters.

The university plans to cut 81 full-time positions, most of which have been empty since a hiring freeze was put into effect in February. Another 144 positions are to be eliminated through attrition and layoffs by December.

The 19,000-student university has about 1,630 full-time employees.

Dead head (stones):

TONTOGANY — A Tontogany Cemetery official has estimated costs of damage in a Wednesday tombstone vandalism incident at more than $35,000.

The incident is believed to be related to theft of a truck recovered by Bowling Green Police the same day.

Sixty-four tombstones in the cemetery were overturned and 31 damaged.

A sheriff's deputy reported the vandalism at about 4:30 a.m. after he discovered tombstones lying on Tontogany Creek Road in front of the cemetery.

Pemberville woman reports seeing UFOs in field

by Chris Hawley
The BG News

As the University prepared for the onslaught of thousands of children during Sibs and Kids Weekend, other strange creatures were making their presence known in Wood County.

A 36-year-old Pemberville woman told a Wood County Sheriff's Department dispatcher she and her boyfriend had watched four lighted, unidentified objects flying above a field Wednesday morning.

The woman, who asked that her name not be printed, said she was driving home at about 12:30 a.m. when she saw the objects flying around radio transmission towers at the corner of Route 105 and Rees Road. The woman said she stopped her car to watch the objects and listen for noises.

"I just felt compelled to watch," she said. "I never felt like I was in danger."

The woman described the objects as top-shaped and illuminated by red and white lights. She said the objects moved in all directions and stopped quickly. One of the objects emitted smoke and and a "hydraulic" sound when it moved, the woman said.

At one point, one of the objects moved directly toward the vehicle and aimed two "extremely bright" white lights at her, the woman said.

"I almost felt like whatever it was was watching me as much as I was watching them," she said.

The woman said she drove home and watched the objects from her driveway. Her boyfriend joined her about 45 minutes later, saying he had encountered a patch of smokey-smelling fog while driving to her home.

After watching the objects together, the two attempted to drive toward them at about 3 a.m. The objects then disappeared, the woman said.

The woman's boyfriend was not available for comment.

The woman said she called the sheriff's department at about 11 a.m. to learn if anyone else had seen the objects. Wood County Sheriff's Department Records Officer Brenda Brenneman said no other sightings were reported.

Brimmer said that they made the video because, "We're just nuts and we like to have fun."

Meanwhile, (right) Bookstore employees Teri Long, Jaci Browant and Sherry Abke take a peek at the spectacle from the outside.

More than 50 videos were made at $3 each. This was the second year that Fun Flicks, sponsored by the University Activities Organization, came to Bowling Green.

BG stadium may be renamed for Perry

HURON — The University's Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet 10 a.m. today at the Firelands College campus.

Topping the agenda will be the proposed honoring of the late Doyt L. Perry, the winningest football coach in University history. Perry passed away last month.

The board action would change the name of the BGSU football stadium to Doyt L. Perry Stadium. Currently, only the field itself is named after the coach.

The board will not be taking any action this month in regard to the current budget crisis affecting the University. According to secretary of the board Lester Barber, all formal budget decisions will be made at the next board meeting, scheduled for May 8.

The board will meet in the east lounge/east building at Firelands.

John Major predicted to win Britain's prime minister race

by Maureen Johnson
The Associated Press

LONDON — Prime Minister John Major, who waged a come-from-behind campaign to extend 13 years of Conservative Party government, appeared headed for a slight majority in the House of Commons following Thursday's elections.

With results in hand from 362 seats out of the 651 contested, the British Broadcasting Corp. projected that Major's party would win a total of 328 seats, two more than a majority.

Projections by Independent Television News gave the Conservatives 329 seats, Labor 270 and Liberal Democrats 24.

"We were written off at the weekend, but we didn't sink into defeatism," said Home Secretary Kenneth Baker, a former Conservative Party chairman.

"The battle is not yet over," insisted Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock.

The BBC projected the Conservatives would win 43 percent of the popular vote, matching their share in three landslide victories under Margaret Thatcher.

"This is very, very bad news for Labor," said BBC analyst Peter Kellner. "It is also rotten news for the pollsters ... they blew it."

The combined verdict of the last opinion polls this week showed Labor about a point ahead, though the difference was well within the margin of error.

The projections moved steadily toward the Conservatives

City studies 13 plans for redistricting

by Doug Baker
The BG News

Thirteen plans for redistricting the city's unevenly distributed wards were examined by Bowling Green City Council's Government and Personnel Committee Thursday night, but none were chosen to replace the current set up.

The committee looked at various four- and six-ward maps which attempted to more equally distribute the city's population based on the 1990 census figures. The meeting was designed to familiarize committee members with the various proposals.

Most of the maps were drawn by city engineers but several students also presented redistricting maps to the committee.

The committee will put the maps on display in Wood County Library for the public to examine. Anybody wishing to offer a plan must submit it by 5 p.m. on April 20. City maps can be picked up at the city's offices, 304 N. Church St. Junior Jesse Squire and senior Jennifer Sader presented both four- and six-ward maps they had drawn.

"What we tried to achieve was numerical accuracy using main roads as dividing lines," Squire said. "The difference between the largest and smallest districts is 51 people."

U.S. jury finds Noriega guilty of drug charges

by Richard Cole
The Associated Press

MIAMI — Manuel Noriega was convicted of eight of 10 drug and racketeering charges that led to the 1989 U.S. invasion of Panama.

The former Panamanian leader was found guilty of the key counts of racketeering and racketeering conspiracy, plus six lesser charges. He was acquitted of two lesser charges, cocaine distribution and conspiracy to import cocaine.

The federal court trial lasted seven months, during which the government painstakingly built its case against a head of state it called "a small man in a general's uniform" who was "just another crooked cop."

The jury finished work in its fifth day of deliberations. On Wednesday, they announced they were deadlocked with one holdout; U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler urged them to try again.

Noriega's lawyers maintained he was a victim

Letters

USG Senators had other alternatives besides walk-out

The BG News:

I am writing this letter in response to the recent events of USG, more specifically -- the walk out by the College Republicans during the March 30 meeting.

When USG bill 91-92-24 -- concerning the Defense Department control over the University Board of Trustees -- was introduced and ready to be voted on, the College Republicans, including their president and vice president, passed a note to all four of their members then got up and left, ruining quorum.

These people are not only CR's, they are your senators! Dwayne Sattler, CR president, is a senator-at-large, which means he is to represent all students. Wendy Hanselman, CR vice president, is the HSA rep to USG.

Amanda Herriot was proxying for an at-large senator representing all students. And last but not least, Dave Dorland, the person who instigated the walk out -- CR rep to USG.

Do you think these four people did their job by not discussing the bill, and ruining the chances for it to be passed? I don't.

They obviously disagreed with the bill because the Ohio Senate Bill 249, (that our USG bill opposes) was written by a Republican, and God forbid they disagree with someone in their own party!

I'm a co-sponsor of the USG bill, I obviously agree with it, but if the CR's disagree, fine! Vote "no" on the bill -- but at least have the decency to let the rest of the group vote on it.

This is just another example of Republicans running away from problems. When something is important they don't want to deal with -- they just close their eyes and claim ignorance.

We're all in this. Please, voice your disapproval for these actions and let's stand up for our rights together.

Because remember, united we stand but divided we fall. Sam Melendez

Voting Democrat is not the "ultimate sin" to everyone

The BG News:

I am responding to Joseph E. Vauley's letter regarding the sinfulness of voting Democrat. As a Roman Catholic, I "confess" to being a young woman taking the pro-choice viewpoint.

His judgmental letter made me cringe and not just because of our differences on the abortion issue. I thought to myself "Do the words 'responsible voting' mean anything to this man?" Sure enough, his letter had already answered my question.

By voting Republican merely because the candidates oppose abortion, too many other issues are overlooked. If we write-off Democratic candidates merely because they are pro-choice, would our society ultimately benefit? I don't think so!

It is unfortunate Vauley and other voters do not take the time and energy to look at the whole picture of change each candidate will bring to this country.

Let's all turn off the TV and stop hearing what the candidates want us to hear! Where would each of us like to see our country heading as far as military spending, education, welfare and excessive government budgets, among others, are concerned? I'll say it again -- the key words are BIG PICTURE!

Thank you, Vauley, for illustrating my point. You have shown us a perfect example of irresponsible voting!

I took the liberty of using the "Joseph E. Vauley Method o. Logic" and ran into some trouble: I am against the death penalty, so I must not vote for George Bush. But I am pro-choice, so I won't commit the "sin" of voting Democrat. But that means I must vote Republican ... blah, blah, blah.

Hmmmm ... it looks like I'm a candidate for eternal damnation.

Hanselman didn't join in walk-out

The BG News:

In response to the number of attacks which have been launched the past week -- allow me to make two things very clear:

I did not participate in the USG walkout March 30. USG General Assembly meetings last usually from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The meeting March 30 was unique with the "open forum" portion of the meeting extending it longer than normal due to a special presentation on the governor's possible budget cuts.

By the latter half of the meeting, the number of senators declined. Having a prior commitment at 9:30 p.m., I was anxious to leave at 9:25 when a roll call vote had been completed on the legislation on the floor.

USG should voice the concerns of all undergraduate students. Since this incident, I have visited a general meeting of the Honors Student Association to survey my constituents in regard to USG Bill 91-92-24. Imagine that. Collecting information to present all sides of an issue.

What was undemocratic about the behavior on March 30 was the attempt of an elite few to proclaim they represent the views of the entire undergraduate population.

Stereotypes can be damaging

The BG News:

I am amazed over and over again how false stereotypes lead people to unnecessary and ridiculous action on this campus. A friend of mine fell prey to this verbal nonsense.

He is an international Asian student at BGSU and has been in the states for a few months. His perceptions about America and our culture are just forming, and surely he's still experiencing pains of culture shock from time to time.

The incident occurred as my Asian friend was entering the Union. He was unexpectedly approached and stopped by a group of male students. The students began to verbally harass him by rudely asking, "Where are you from?" and "Do you go to school here?"

My friend, not quite understanding the abrasiveness of their attitudes, reluctantly answered the questions. The verbal abuse didn't stop here -- the group continued in their ignorance, saying, "Okay, but when you're done with school, don't try to get a job here. People like you are taking jobs away from the rest of us."

Is this another organization related to the Ku Klux Klan? Did it ever occur to these students that studying in the states is an excellent opportunity for international students who only want a quality education to take back to their native country?

And let's not be so ethnocentric about Americans. Not every international student is knocking themselves over to stay here; especially with attitudes like this buzzing around campuses.

I wonder if this group ever stopped to think what impression they were leaving with this international student to take home. I was once told, "You may be the only American somebody meets, and what they think of you will determine what they think about America."

Instead of concentrating on scaring people out of this country, why don't you study harder, join a few organizations and get involved on campus.

Then you wouldn't need to worry about an international student having the edge on you in the workplace because you'd be qualified. Remember, we're all immigrants so no one should be telling anyone to go home.

Unconcerned American populace keeps racism like last week's Supreme Court ruling on the "good faith" efforts of school systems to achieve court-ordered desegregation goals.

In the case of Freeman vs. Pitts, the court ruled in an 8 to 0 decision (the court's last bastion of defense for basic human rights, Justice Clarence Thomas, was still undergoing his "high tech-lynching" which we "carping lying little liberals" call a confirmation hearing -- so he sat this one out) that school districts, some which have been historically segregated by law on the basis of race, can now be gradually released from school desegregation orders if it can be shown that, according to Justice Anthony Kennedy, "The school district has erased the vestiges of segregation..."

What this means is if the school district has put forth an effort to desegregate itself -- "a good faith effort" -- it may be qualified to be released from Federal desegregation orders because according to Justice Kennedy, "Racial balance is not to be achieved for its own sake. It is to be pursued when racial imbalance has been caused by a constitutional violation. Once the racial imbalance

"The history of the American negro is the history of this strife -- this longing to attain self -- conscious manhood, to merge his double self into a better and truer self. He would not Africanize America, for America has too much to teach the world and Africa. He would not bleach the negro soul in a flood of white Americanism, for he knows that negro blood has a message for the world. He simply wishes to be both a negro and an American, without being cursed and spit upon by his fellows -- without having the doors of opportunity closed roughly in his face."

W.E.B. DuBois wrote these words in his essay The Souls of Black Folk in 1903, a few short years after the Supreme Court of the United States had ruled in a 7 to 1 decision in the case of Plessy vs. Ferguson that "separate, but equal" was to be the law of the land in our nation.

Perhaps DuBois was on to something in 1903: while cultural differences are important and must never be forgotten or pushed aside -- the ultimate goal, the prize, is to be a nation of equal people -- people who can live, work and watch their children grow up together in a nation where racism, discrimination and segregation no longer have a place in society.

DuBois realized it in 1903 -- but have we ever forgotten those goals in 1992.

Every place we turn in America, 1992, we see the continuing workings of our American apartheid system: separatism, racist attacks, poverty and more often than not, we close our eyes to the problem and allow it to flourish even more.

It's not the David Dukes or Louis Farrakhans who keep racial hatred alive (while they may lead the cause, they are but spokesmen), it is not the liberals or conservatives, Republicans or Democrats who make this racial problem a fact of life today -- in fact it's us, the apathetic, uninvolved American populace which make all of this hatred possible.

All of this hatred and discord all around us, yet we choose to ignore it -- "America, land of the free, home of the brave..."

It is that ignorance which has brought the current happenings due to the De jure (by law) violation has been remedied, the school district is under no duty to remedy racial imbalances that are caused by demographic factors ... it is beyond the practical ability and the authority of the federal courts to try to counteract these kinds of continuous and massive demographic shifts..."

So there you go -- white flight is OK, apartheid in our cities is something that is beyond our control, racism cannot be solved.

What happened to the prize: racial harmony and equality for all? It seemed so promising after Brown vs. Board of Education in 1954, why now have we thrown our hands up in disgust and said "to hell with it, it just isn't going to work" -- is this the way to achieve what DuBois was referring to in 1903?

Must we continue with steps like the Pitts decision or like the recent University decision to bring the National Pan Hellenic Council to campus and affirm once and for all that we are a separated, racially divided institution -- or do we, as students and future leaders demand more from our institution?

Russ Kahler is a junior political science major from Toledo who, despite the fact that his roommate subscribes to Readers Digest, wrote this column using only his "extensive political knowledge."

Arsenio in the house:
WILBERFORCE (AP) -- Television talk show host Arsenio Hall was presented with an honorary degree Wednesday at Central State University.

Hall received an honorary doctorate of humane letters during a convocation that attracted nearly 1,000 people.

Hall said he was proud to be at Central State, which is a predominantly black school, and realizes there is hope for the future.

"That hope is in this room," Hall said. "We can do everything. We can be anything we want to be. I dare you to dream and chase those dreams and make them come true."

Hall is national ambassador for the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program.

Earlier, he made a surprise appearance at Cox Elementary School in nearby Xenia, where he visited students in a DARE class and several other classes.

Miami considers cuts:

OXFORD (AP) -- Miami University's board of trustees convenes this weekend to consider $3 million in budget cuts to meet an expected 5 percent decrease in state funding.

School President Paul Pearson is recommending cuts in Miami's budget for the 1992-93 academic year. Miami is receiving $55.8 million in state support for the 1991-92 year. Miami administrators expect a 5 percent, or $3 million, reduction next year as the state copes with a budget crunch.

The trustees meet Friday and Saturday and will discuss what may have to be cut if there are additional reductions in the state's financial support, university spokesman Richard Little said.

Rumors of KKK cause students to leave

by Jose Martinez
The Associated Press

OLIVET, Mich. -- Joann Burch missed work to help her daughter move out of an Olivet College dormitory a week after black and white students got into a brawl.

"It looks like graduation day, but it's just the opposite," the black woman said Wednesday as she loaded a bag of clothing into her pickup. "These kids don't want to go, but school officials here just can't guarantee their safety. It's unsafe."

School officials have increased security and insist the campus is safe for black students. Still, rumors of Ku Klux Klan activity are frightening many of Olivet's 50 black students.

With three weeks left in the semester for the 650 students enrolled in the liberal arts college, 35 black students announced Wednesday they were leaving.

They were excused from class, providing they return for exams or complete course work by mail. A few said they are quitting school.

"I came here because I thought it was a small and quiet school," said Burch's 18-year-old daughter, Ericka. She said she planned to enroll at Eastern Michigan University in the fall for her sophomore year.

Racial tensions flared April 2 after an argument between a white couple, police said. When the boyfriend returned with two black friends and knocked on his girlfriend's door, the woman telephoned a mostly white fraternity for help.

Several fraternity members confronted the two black men. Others joined the melee until about 70 students wound up brawling. Two students suffered minor injuries. No arrests were made.

Students said racial tensions had been building for weeks.

College President Donald Morris said that the melee was of "an isolated nature" but that he understood the students' fears.

He said the school is hiring four security guards for its three dormitories at night, arranging for increased police patrols and setting up a student escort service. The campus judicial board scheduled hearings on the brawl for tonight.

Still, Henry Henderson, president of the school's black fraternity, Elite, said he plans to commute 90 miles to Olivet from his home for the rest of the semester. The school is about 25 miles southwest of Lansing.

"The lines of communication are still open. But we need to negotiate from a position of safety," he said.

A black student said this week that a threat and a racial slur were left on his answering machine. No other incidents have been reported, but there have been rumors. Henderson said a strange van was seen on campus Tuesday night, and word spread among black students that it belonged to the KKK.

The decision by the black students to leave the campus upset some of their white classmates.

College freshman campaigns for U.S. presidency

Kogan: would have asked ex-New York City mayor Ed Koch to run as a Vice President, but couldn't find his address.

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (CPS) -- Proclaiming that he is fed up with the "ridiculousness of elections," an 18-year-old Kalamazoo College freshman is waging an unofficial campaign for president of the United States.

"Also I need the money. Tuition costs are getting high," Alexander Kogan said.

Kogan has been pressing the flesh, begging for money and garnering support as a write-in candidate in a campaign that grew from a campus joke and spread into the Kalamazoo community.

In a moment of disgust with the presidential race, Kogan founded the "Seafood on the Wall Party," named for the Kalamazoo cafeteria, which has walls that are decorated with orange-colored lobster and crab shells, and proclaimed himself a candidate. However, he cannot run officially because of the 35-year-old age requirement.

"We asked Ed Koch to be my running mate, but we couldn't find his address, so we sent it in care of the New York post office," said Kogan, who said

Koch was qualified because he, too, was a comedian.

"My father is my second choice for vice president," he said.

Kogan promises that one of the first things he will do is force the House of Representatives to write their checks on rubber balls "so they will bounce before they get to the bank."

When asked to repeat the motto of the Seafood on the Wall Party, Kogan replied, "The Weather is Getting Hotter, The Food is Getting Scarce, We've Brains the Size of Walnuts and I Might As Well be in the White House."

The Chicago native said he has campaign activists carrying posters and fliers to their campuses in Iowa, Illinois and other parts of Michigan.

Kogan has a three-step plan for America: first, a nationwide rummage sale to wipe out the federal deficit; second, the elimination of exit polls to predict election outcomes; and third, a federal tax placed on oatmeal, bad jokes and ugly shoes.

"Like Socrates, you must remember this: presidents must be comedians, and comedians must be presidents," Kogan said.

Wards

According to Mayor Wes Hoffman, it is unrealistic to try and reach the federal standard which says the population of the wards must be distributed within one-tenth of a percent of each other.

"The thing to do is simply say we should aim to get them as close as possible," Hoffman said. "If I were doing it I would take the one that seems to provide the best balance."

Sader stated she and Squire drew the map because they were interested in seeing the city's wards fairly redistricted.

"It was actually kind of fun," she said.

Senior Michael Brennan also submitted a six-ward plan in which the campus is divided into three parts with a large part of the campus being a ward in itself. The other two sections would be a mixture of on- and off-campus neighborhoods.

Brennan stated the wards should be redistricted in a compact manner as opposed to long strips running east and west or north and south in the city.

"Whenever you divide the city into strips it destroys the geographical integrity," he said. "It removes the neighborhood feeling from the ward system."

Hoffman said he leans toward a four-ward plan because it is simpler and he would like to see the student population mixed with resident population so the students will feel like part of the community and not feel isolated.

"Some of the plans that blend the campus and the community are better," he said.

after the polls closed as Labor failed to win in several battleground districts.

If no party wins a majority, Major would have the first chance to line up enough support from other parties to govern. If he failed, Kinnock would have a try.

The rejuvenated Labor Party campaigned hard on the theme that the Tories have held power too long. But what hurt the Conservatives most was an enduring recession that has pushed the unemployment rate to 9.4 percent.

The other big issues were taxation and the state-run National Health Service.

The opinion polls suggested that both major parties might fail to win a majority in the 651-member House of Commons, which has happened five other times this century.

If that occurred, both parties likely would try to form a government based on the informal support of smaller parties. As the incumbent prime minister, Major would get to try first.

Officials reported a steady voter turnout in bright sunshine that bathed most of the nation. Usually about 75 percent of the 43.6 million voters in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland cast ballots.

Speculation that the Conservatives would win boosted share prices on the London Stock Exchange. The Financial Times Stock Exchange 100-share index rose 43.2 points to close at 2,436.4.

Schimpf awarded:

The director of food operations at the University is one of nine food industry leaders who will receive Silver Plate Awards May 18 in Chicago.

Jane Schimpf is being honored by the International Foodservice Manufacturers Association for lasting and outstanding contributions to the food service industry.

This marks the second time in 12 months that Schimpf has won a major, national food service award. Last May she was presented an Ivy Award by Restaurants and Institutions magazine.

Any person worldwide engaged in the ownership, management of or employment at an establishment in one of the nine segments of the industry is eligible for an IFMA Silver Plate Award. Schimpf is being recognized in the college and university category.

Anti-abortion rally set:

Anti-abortion activists will hold a Pro-Life Student Prayer Rally in Columbus Saturday to try to sway legislators to their cause.

"Students are sending their legislators a message that there are college students who are Christians and who are pro-life voters," said Ken Gillaspay, vice president of Northwest Ohio in Students for Life.

A bus will be leaving from the Union at 8 a.m. and about 50 University students are expected to attend. The cost is $5.

"As long as abortion on de-

mand is legal there will be actions taken against it," Gillaspay said.

Cop jobs, anyone?

Persons interested in a law enforcement career are invited to attend the Criminal Justice Job Fair at the University today.

The fair, sponsored by the Ohio Council of Criminal Justice Educators, will have more than 60 federal, state and local agency representatives available to discuss job and career opportunities.

Students from Ohio and southern Michigan schools have been invited to talk with the prospective employers, who will have information booths set up from 10:30 a.m. - 2:30 p.m. in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom.

Speaker outlines new Russia

Discussion focuses on shift from command to market economy

by Christopher Miller
The BG News

The economic transition facing Russia and her former allies may be a difficult one according to Nobel prize-winning economist James Buchanan.

Buchanan opened the Social Philosophy and Policy Center's conference -- Liberalism and the Economic Order -- Thursday evening at the Moore Musical Art Center's Choral Room.

According to Kory Tilgner, executive manager of the Social Philosophy and Policy Center, the conference, which will continue through Saturday, is centering on the events that have transformed Eastern and Central Europe.

Tilgner said the conference will center on two questions: what economic institutions are compatible and which are incompatible with liberal political institutions and: what economic institutions, if any, are required by former Eastern political institutions.

Buchanan's session focused on the difficulty Eastern bloc nations, particularly Russia, will have in switching from a command economy to a market economy.

"In a market economy, the seller has to cajole the buyer," Buchanan said. "In a command economy it's just the opposite."

Buchanan related his exposure to the Russian command economy mentality during a stay in Moscow in September of 1990.

"I was struck by the difference in behavioral attitudes of people in what was then the Soviet Union," Buchanan said.

In particular, Buchanan was surprised by the lack of incentive on behalf of the merchants, who seemed unconcerned with customer service.

"The only place you saw any variation of that was in the streets where the people sold you dolls and fur hats," Buchanan said.

Ironically, these aggressive merchants were viewed as criminals under the old system, Buchanan said.

Buchanan said such attitudes stem from conditioning of the command economy that prevailed in Eastern Europe for 70 years.

"There's an old story in Russia," Buchanan said, "that both parties doing an exchange lose: one loses the money and the other loses the goods."

"You have to change that mentality," Buchanan said.

Olympic theme set for Sibs and Kids Weekend

by Ashley Matthews
The BG News

Once a year, a weekend is set aside at the University devoted entirely to the siblings and children of University students.

Sibs and Kids Weekend is designed to provide an opportunity for students and their younger siblings to participate in fun and educational events sponsored by Student Activities and Orientation.

This year the theme for the weekend is "The Thrill of Victory and the Agony of Defeat," stressing the Olympics idea.

Beginning Friday evening with a dance in Eppler South and concluding Sunday afternoon with ice skating and bowling, the weekend is packed with a variety of entertaining and cultural events. A trip to the Toledo Zoo on Saturday morning is the only occasion when students must register and pay for something.

Saturday evening, the Peace and Freedom Mandela Celebration in Northeast Commons will celebrate South African civil rights leader Nelson Mandela's release from prison with a little help from the music of local reggae band Groovemaster.

Carlos Sneed, graduate adviser for the Office of Multicultural Affairs, said that planning and organizing this weekend has been really exciting for him.

"I think [Sibs and Kids Weekend] allows current students to interact with each other as well as with their younger siblings," Sneed said. "It also allows younger brothers and sisters to get a glimpse of campus life, exposing them to the college environment."

Sales of T-shirts with the weekend's logo printed on them have been successful this year. Sneed has received great personal satisfaction from the sales.

"You can tell the students are really excited to have their younger brothers and sisters come up for the weekend," he said.

of U.S. politics, saying the case "smelled all the way to Washington." They had defended him by portraying the government's witnesses - confessed drug traffickers in many cases - as unscrupulous thugs looking only for a "get-out-of-jail-free card."

The trial marked the first time the United States invaded a sovereign country and brought back its leader for a trial on criminal charges.

Noriega, who records say is 54, was indicted on Feb. 4, 1988, along with 15 other people, including the head of Colombia's Medellin drug cartel, Pablo Escobar. At the time, Noriega was still in power in Panama, and sneered at U.S. demands that he step down.

On Dec. 20, 1989, the United States invaded Panama. U.S. forces tracked Noriega to a Vatican mission in Panama City, surrounded it and blasted the Panamanian leader with rock music until he surrendered.

His trial opened in U.S. District Court on Sept. 5 with jury selection; opening arguments began Sept. 16.

The government called 46 witnesses, plus 14 others on rebuttal after the defense rested. The defense called 19 to the stand.

The most crucial prosecution witnesses were confessed drug traffickers, some with violent streaks, including Carlos Lehder, Max Mermelstein and Jose "Pepe" Cabrera. In exchange for pointing the finger at Noriega, they won reduced sentences, immunity from other charges and sometimes the right to keep millions of dollars in drug profits.

The witnesses said Noriega's formal relationship with the Medellin traffickers began in late 1981. Leftist Colombian guerrillas had kidnapped the sister of the cartel's Ochoa brothers. As head of Panama's powerful G-2 intelligence division, Noriega negotiated her release.

In response, pleased cartel leaders sent emissaries to him in early 1982 to establish a business arrangement, prosecutors said.

Soon, prosecutors said, drug and cash-laden Colombian planes were flying into Panamanian airports, shipping cocaine on to the United States and laundering their profits in Panamanian banks.

Star witness Floyd Carlton, a Panamanian drug and gun smuggler, said he made four trips from Colombia to remote Panamanian air strips with loads of cartel cocaine.

Each time, he said, he passed along up to $200,000 in cash to Noriega through an aide.

In the summer of 1983, Noriega, about to become Panama's military leader, visited Medellin, taking a briefcase from the Ochoas containing $500,000, according to two witnesses. He even took a side trip to Pablo Escobar's ranch, and was "given" six French dancing girls as a bonus, according to testimony.

But in the spring and summer of 1984, Noriega's dealings with the cartel were said to have soured.

It began when Colombian authorities raided the Tranquilandia drug lab complex in southern Colombia.

Much of the defense case lay in poking holes in the sometimes inconsistent testimony of prosecution witnesses.

Girl Scout cookies stolen by cop-thief

SANDUSKY (AP) -- A police officer has been charged with stealing at least 10 cases of Girl Scout cookies he was supposed to distribute to troops, authorities said Thursday.

"It's rather embarrassing, I can tell you that," Police Chief Gerald Lechner said.

Officers searched Kenneth Hutton's home Monday and found eight full cases and two empty cases of Girl Scout cookies. The cases were valued at $30 each. Hutton also was accused of stealing fir trees from a local nursery.

Hutton, 35, was suspended with pay pending a disciplinary hearing. A hearing date was not set.

Lechner said he would recommend that Hutton be fired.

Hutton was charged with one count each of felony theft and theft in office.

He pleaded innocent in Municipal Court and was released without bond. Another hearing hasn't been scheduled.

If convicted on both counts, Hutton could be sentenced to 3 and 1/2 years in prison.

Hutton has an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached for comment.

Capt. Curt Muehling said other police officers may have been involved in the cookie thefts. The investigation was continuing.

Hutton allegedly stole the cookies March 5. He and other off-duty police officers were paid by Millot Transfer to deliver cookies from Sandusky, a Lake Erie City 50 miles west of Cleveland, to various distribution points.

Bill might restrict minors' use of non-alcoholic beer

by Robert E. Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- State representatives voted Thursday to ban the sale of non-alcoholic beer and malt beverages to minors.

The 70-25 vote sent the measure to the Senate as the House acted on more than two dozen other measures before adjourning for a spring recess.

Rep. Johnnie Maier, D-Massillon, sponsored the bill that outlaws possession as well as sale of what he called "practice beer" to minors.

He said the products are displayed with beer in carryouts and other stores and that they "look like beer and taste like beer."

He said youth counselors believe its consumption is likely to lead to alcohol or substance abuse, especially among youngsters who may have a predisposition for alcoholism.

"It's a great product for adults," Maier said, stressing that his bill does not otherwise interfere with its sale. It also does not add state regulation or impose taxes on the products.

The bill also bans possession or sale of beverages to minors that contain less than 0.5 percent alcohol. He said five other states have similar laws.

Reps. Robert Corbin, R-Dayton, and Lynn Wachtmann, R-Napoleon, led a floor fight against Maier's bill. They said it presumes the failure of parents to oversee their youngsters and smacks of "legislative overkill."

Corbin said such products are being promoted as a harmless substitute for real beer or other alcoholic drinks.

Alcohol hinders fat metabolism, causes beer bellies in drinkers

BOSTON (AP) -- A study found that booze makes the body burn fat more slowly, which helps explain those beer bellies, saddlebags and spare tires on heavy drinkers.

The study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, tackled the question of alcohol's effect on the way the body uses different nutrients. Its conclusion: Alcohol throws off the body's normal disposal of fat.

Any fat that is not burned is stored. That means flab in the belly, the behind and thighs - anywhere people tend to put on weight.

Exactly how alcohol suppresses fat disposal isn't clear, however.

Mechanic dies at Dayton Airport

DAYTON (AP) -- A mechanic at Dayton International Airport was killed when the metal rim of a plane tire he had inflated disintegrated and blew apart, the victim's employer said Thursday.

Ron Ryan, owner of Ryan International Aviation, said the worker had finished inflating the nose tire of the passenger plane with nitrogen when the rim broke apart.

"The rim piece came loose and hit him in the chest," Ryan said. "It appears that it's one of those freak deals where you had a defective rim and nobody knew about it until it fell apart. It's a very tragic thing."

The accident happened about 9 p.m. Wednesday as the man was working on a Trans World Airlines DC-9, which was parked at a terminal gate.

The victim was identified by airport officials and the Montgomery County coroner's office as Timothy A. Knapp, 29, of suburban Trotwood. Coroner's officials said Knapp was killed instantly after being struck by pieces of tire and the tire rim.

Mort Edelman, spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration, said reports from FAA investigators indicate that the tire exploded as it was being inflated. He said such incidents are rare.

Knapp had worked for the company for about two years. Ryan said he had an excellent work record.

The National Transportation Safety Board doesn't plan to investigate the accident because there were no passengers on the plane when it occurred.

MAC pitcher of the week Jody Record delivers a pitch Tuesday during a 5-1 victory over Toledo. She will be in action this weekend when BG hosts the Ohio Bobcats.

Jays sweep Tigers

Blue Jays 3, Tigers 1: Juan Guzman matched his career high with 10 strikeouts and Dave Winfield hit his first home run for Toronto, leading the Blue Jays over the Detroit Tigers 3-1 Thursday for a three-game sweep.

Guzman, who was 10-3 last season, allowed three hits in seven innings and walked four. Tim Henke pitched a one-hit eighth and Duane Ward pitched a perfect ninth for his second save.

Walt Terrell, 12-14 in 1991, allowed all three runs and six hits in 8 1-3 innings.

Detroit's Tony Phillips was ejected in the ninth by home plate umpire Tim Welke for arguing. Phillips had argued with Welke in the first inning after striking out with two outs and the bases loaded.

Kelly Gruber's two-out homer in the first put Toronto ahead. Detroit loaded the bases in the bottom of the inning with one out, but Guzman struck out Mickey Tettleton and Phillips. The Tigers then tied the score in the second when Mark Carreon led off with his first American League home run.

Toronto took the lead in the sixth when Devon White walked, stole second, was sacrificed to third by Roberto Alomar and scored on Kelly Gruber's sacrifice fly.

Winfield, signed by Toronto as a free agent for $2.3 million, hit his 407th career home run in the ninth, chasing Terrell.

Orioles 2, Indians 0: Ben McDonald made it three shutouts in as many games at Oriole Park, beating Cleveland 2-0 Thursday night in a new stadium that appears to be a pitcher's delight.

McDonald (1-0) allowed two hits and a walk while striking out nine in his fifth complete game in the majors. He let just one runner get as far as third base.

It's far too early to judge, but maybe the roomy power-alleys (it's 410 feet to deepest left-center) in the Orioles' new stadium could give it a reputation as a pitcher's park.

On opening day, Baltimore's Rick Sutcliffe threw a five-hit shutout. On Wednesday, Dave Otto and Rod Nichols combined to blank the Orioles. Then came McDonald's gem, in which he retired the final 13 Indians and 18 of the last 19.

In three games at Camden Yards, the teams combined for just 27 hits.

McDonald outdueled Jack Armstrong (0-1), who allowed two runs and six hits in six-plus innings. One of those hits was a solo homer by Mike Devereaux, the first Oriole to connect in the new ballpark.

The Orioles used some daring baserunning by Brady Anderson to take a 1-0 lead in the third. Hitless in his first nine at-bats in 1992, Anderson sent a sinking liner to center that became a double after Alex Cole had trouble handling the ball. Joe Orsulak then grounded a single to left, and Anderson slid under the high throw to the plate.

Cleveland threatened in the fourth when Glenallen Hill singled, stole second and went to third on a one-out grounder. Paul Sorrento then grounded out.

Tennis team begin MAC play

Men and women battle EMU today, WMU Saturday

by Randy Setter
sports writer

The weekend sees plenty of tennis action with five matches this weekend as the men's and women's teams see the start of their MAC schedules.

The men's team starts off the weekend hosting MAC rival Eastern Michigan at 3 p.m. at the Robert Keefe Tennis Courts. They host Western Michigan at 1:00 p.m. on Saturday afternoon. The team is 4-6 overall heading into the MAC season after a long layoff since playing Southern Alabama on March 20. In addition to team practices, the men scrimmaged against Kenyon's men's team.

Coach Dave Morin does not see the long layoff as a disadvantage.

"We should be real fresh and match-tough," said Morin. "We're favored in both, but we still have to go out and play."

"We should be real fresh and match-tough. We're favored in both, but we still have to go out and play."

Dave Morin, head tennis coach

Number two singles player Todd Koehler should be able to play despite a sore arm that has been limiting his game. The injury has bothered him in the past, but has recently flared up.

The men face off against Minnesota, the fourteenth-ranked team in the nation in their weekend closing match on Sunday morning at 10:00 a.m.

Morin sees the match as a good learning experience and an opportunity to compete against a top level team in the nation.

"Playing against Minnesota will be great for our program," said Morin. "We'll get to see one of the best teams in the country and see what it takes to get to that level."

The women's team is away at Eastern Michigan on Friday looking to better their 10-6 overall record and to get their MAC season off to a good start.

The team then travels to Western Michigan on Saturday at 1:00 p.m. to face the tough Bronco squad.

Coach Penny Dean remains optimistic about the matches against the two top teams in the MAC.

"Real tough, especially Western," Dean said. "We will have to play at the top of our games at all positions, giving 110%."

The women face a tough challenge in Western Michigan, they have beaten Big 10 schools and are ranked higher regionally.

The singles lineup will remain the same with Carla Marshack (number one), Tisa Pacella (number two), Erin Bowbeer (number three), Karen Micus (number four), Lori Wydish (number five), and Cara Whelan (number six).

Doubles action will see a slight change as Tisa Pacella and Melissa Seely-Brown will team up. The pair played together earlier in the season at number one doubles, winning the match. Otherwise, it will be the same matchups with Marshack and Bowbeer at number one doubles and Sarah Emdin and Micus at number two doubles.

"Doubles are important this weekend," said Dean. "It will be a good test to see where we stand."

Not only are both teams vying for overall team victories in the dual matches, but the individuals are vying for important victories to achieve high seeding in the MAC Championships.

Tim Norman/The BG News

Baseball enters key stretch against OU

by Aaron Dorksen
sports writer

During the next week BG baseball fans will get a good idea whether this year's Falcons are contenders or pretenders.

BG will embark on a crucial part of their schedule beginning today with a four game series with the Ohio Bobcats. The team will return home for a doubleheader with Cleveland State Sunday, followed by MAC action Tuesday at Eastern Michigan and a four game series next weekend with Miami.

The Falcons, 7-11, 1-5, have played good baseball lately winning four of their last six after hitting a season low last Friday when they were rocked by Kent 17-3 and 6-2.

"We didn't play real well last Friday against Kent State, we got beat by a couple of touchdowns in the first game and lost the second and we knew the players were going to be down," Schmitz said.

"We kind of took a page out of coach (Gary) Blackney's book and his speech he used before the Central Michigan game," he said. "We used that and we told the players each series is a championship series and we have to play like we're facing elimination and the boys have responded."

Today's doubleheader with Ohio, 12-8, 5-5, will be a tough test for the Falcons but will provide the team with a shot in the arm if they can split or win the series.

The Bobcats rank in the top half of the MAC in every offensive category and are second in runs scored (6.40), third in ERA (4.50), and fourth in batting (.306).

"I know they have some outstanding pitching and they don't beat themselves," Schmitz said.

Key position players for OU are shortstop Rich Czajkowski (.338, 11 RBI), first baseman Chad Young (.273, 15 RBI, 4 HR) and center fielder Dirk Harper (.298, 12 RBI, 2 HR) a second team All-MAC selection last season.

First team All-MAC pitcher Joe Morvay (1-1, 2.43) and Doug Milicki (2-1, 3.57) anchor the pitching staff.

Schmitz will call on Greg Sharp (1-2, 3.67) and Jeff Brown (0-1, 4.91) today with Derek Common (2-2, 4.38) and Chris Boggs (1-1, 4.73) getting the call Saturday.

Dr. Dave's Music Quiz

by Dave Baskind
The Incredible College of Musical Knowledge

Some thoughts: Yes, 201s, it's test time (and I am your TA). Whether or not you want to admit it, summer is coming. "Cafe Flesh." "There's a fine line between stupid and clever." Hooray. Tap is back. "Summer lovin' had me a blast." "The more things change, the more they stay the same" - I don't buy it. "Bohemian Rhapsody" is back in the Top 10 - What bliss!!

The Doctor's 'bad' medicine

After sifting through all the entries, the team of Luisa Palomar and Jenn Vaccaro (great dumb parents story about actually turning a car around on trip to Disney World) were chosen as this week's winners. The correct answers to our 'good' quiz are: 1. Fine Young Cannibals 2. Adam Ant 3. Motley Crue 4. Polson 5. Marky Mark & the Funky Bunch 6. Tina Turner 7. Cyndi Lauper 8. Peter Cetera 9. Tony! Toni! Tone! 10. Ray Charles and Chaka Khan.

For a chance to win, put your name, address, phone number and first makeout spot to "Dr. Dave's Quiz," c/o 214 West Hall or ooze it into the sweeter-than-honey wooden box in 210 West Hall before 8 a.m., Wed., April 15, 1992.

We looked at 'good' music last week. And, we all know that there is a whole lot of 'bad' music out there, too. No value judgments about these songs and groups, but they're all bad. Trust your Doctor:

Freshman level - One bad point each.

1. Who hit #1 in 1987 with "Bad"?

2. What N.J. band hit #1 in 1988 with "Bad Medicine"?

Sophomore level - Two bad points each.

3. Name any two of Color Me Badd's four Top 40 hits.

4. Name any one of Bad English's three Top 40 hits.

Junior level - Three points points each.

5. Name either of Another Bad Creation's 1991 hits.

6. Which Beatle hit the Top 40 in 1984 with "So Bad"?

Senior level - Four bad points each.

7. What "Lush Life" woman hit the Top 10 in 1980 with "Hurt So Bad"?

8. What Florida female-led group hit the Top 10 in 1986 with "Bad Boy"?

Graduate level - Five bad points each.

9. What 'bad' band hit the Top 20 with "If You Needed Somebody" in 1991?

10. What band's first hit, "Don't Treat Me Bad," hit the Top 20 in 1991?

For winning, you'll earn a FREE promo cassette from Finders Records And Tapes at 128 N. Main and an OFFICIAL Dr. Dave diploma. Hey YOU!!! That's not too bad.

I didn't think it was possible, but I found a movie worse than V.I. Warshawski. The movie is Bingo, and it's not just bad, it's beyond bad.

Bingo (PG), directed by Matthew Robbins, chronicles the adventures of a circus dog failure named Bingo.

After his sentence as a circus dog, Bingo runs across the body of a boy who was rendered unconscious in a way fake bike accident. Bingo, being the super genius that he is, revives the boy, and begins his series of life-saving missions. The revived boy, Chuckie, takes Bingo as his pet, but is unable to tell his idiotic family, headed by a stereotypical, dumb jock, football-playing father, an overreactive, neurotic mother (Cindy Williams of Laverne & Shirley fame), and an obnoxious brother named Chuckie.

This movie is actually pretty raunchy, and for many reasons. In one scene, we get to see Bingo sniffing the rear of a female dog and enjoying it. In another, our imaginations are led to dwell on the images of canine colts! After the family moves, and leaves Bingo behind, we get to see Chuckie urinating three times, in hopes that Bingo will catch the scent and follow the family to Green Bay (and yes, we do get to see Bingo sniffing Chuckie's pee!).

The movie continues to suffer and doesn't let up! The acting is abysmal, and the movie is plagued by moronic humor and slipshod direction, as well as overall bad taste! I must admit, however, that there was one element of Bingo I really appreciated - The End.

From the Editors...

Talkin' 'bout my generation.

I forget who said "Youth is wasted on the young," but they were probably a member of the Baby Boomer generation, just like our folks. Born between 1945 and 1960, the Boomers are the most affluent, educated, influential era of people to ever walk the Earth.

Then there are their kids. Us. Socially conscious but cynical. Addicted to the culture of instant gratification but looking toward a future of downward mobility and less-ness. Afraid of the future. Lacking an identity. The Lost Generation. Generation X. Welcome to yourself.

This issue, Insider goes inside the issue that affects you most - e yourself. Turn to pages six and seven and discover who you are and want to be and about the people all around you. Writer Karen Koster delves into the inner depths of the X generation and finds out what makes us tick. Meanwhile, Aggie Colbert takes a look at Generation X, the book. Is it a novel, or so much more? You decide. Then, now that you know who you are, find out how to act like it with a dictionary to all the X-speak you need to know to fit in.

Turn back to page two and take the Dr. Dave test...if you're tough enough. And video critic extraordinaire Steve Aspacher viewed Bingo and came out alive. Find out what you're not missing on page two.

Page three - same as the first. The University is hosting its own ninja academy (OK, not really, but Jane Kilgore takes on a trip to the University's karate club and earned her own Insider black belt). Meanwhile, managing editor Morrella Raleigh brings us the tale of this weekend's Toledo music/poetry/film/art festival at Frankie's. Catch ya there!

Rock Gossip claims all of page four - thus showing how alive and crackling the BG scene is, right? Find out what you'll be missing if you go home or are a geek who stays in on page four.

On page five is the latest, hottest, hippest stuff in the stores music-wise. Def Leppard. The Mighty Mighty Bosstones. The Lightning Seeds. Buy 'em all.

And rounding out another issue comes page eight. Ahhh, page eight. Welcome guest Todd Stanley reviews cinematic escapade White Men Can't Jump. And writer Dave Huffman spins the yarn of a student filmmaker and his debut into the industry this weekend. See ya Monday night at the Mortons.

Insider - we write the songs that make the whole world sing.

Next issue: the bands Rolling Stone never mentions. And they're all from BG. Go figure.

BG karate club a big kick for all

Insider/Colleen Alig

SAND THE FLOOR, WASH THE CAR...Peter James Kowal, University alumni and U.K.S. member, busts some moves.

by Jane Kilgore
Insider guest writer

Many people are getting a big kick out of karate.

University students - as well as Bowling Green residents - are participating in the United Karate System, which is a course taught through the Continuing Education Department on campus. The sport is instructed by Bob and Mary Anne Nicholson, who founded the program at BG in September 1973.

According to the instructors, there are quite a few benefits - including promoted confidence and communication skills - from becoming a member.

"I joined the organization because it was inexpensive, convenient, and it is something that I have always wanted to do," said Angela Mowery, a University student who has been involved in the club since last September. "I have gained physical and mental discipline, self-confidence and many friends since I have become a member."

Self-defense tactics are another obvious result of practicing karate, although out of about 100 members, only four have been forced to use it outside of class and competition, Mary Anne Nicholson said.

The tournaments and competitions entered by U.K.S. members are divided into three events. One division is called kata, which is performed alone like a gymnastics routine. Sparring is compared to a boxing match with feet, and is a part of competition presented with an opponent. A third portion of tournament activity involves sparring with various weapons such as bos and jos (sticks), swords and nunchucks.

Sparring is broken down by age and sex, as well as experience. Generally, the darker your belt, the more experience you have under t.

Insider/Colleen Alig

PREADOLESCENT JUNIOR NINJA CHILDREN...Both the young and old can get something out of karate training.

The club welcomes everyone, no matter what their age or sex. It is composed mostly of men and close to 30 percent women. Although karate used to be predominantly a sport for men, it now promotes strong, powerful attitudes for women. Here they are treated as equals, not as a weaker sex, according to the Nicholsons.

"Women are made up of the same pieces as men, they just learn that the pieces are a little bigger, but they can be taken apart," Bob Nicholson said. "Women are light and quick with better body movements, while men are the ones with the strength. Men are trying to be like the women for flexibility, and women want the men's strength."

Short and tall people both have advantages in karate. Short people are quick, and those that are of the taller build have more reach. Virtually everyone is a candidate to be good in karate if they use their particular stature to their benefit.

"This isn't an activity that you have to be a super jock of America to try," said Mary Anne Nicholson. "The participants are your usual kick-sand-in-the-face kind of people."

The United Karate System meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6-10 p.m. at Eppler Middle. U.K.S. consists of two six week sessions between Fall and Spring, with a 10-week summer session that begins in June. The cost to join is $35 for a beginner and $30 for an advanced participant. Also, there is an $18 fee paid once for a uniform. Interested students can contact the Continuing Education Department at 372-8181 for more information.

'Pop' goes the local culture

AIDS benefit to feature local music, art, films

by Morrella Raleigh
Insider managing editor

This Sunday, in an extravaganza of local artistry, Frankie's, 308 Main St., Toledo, will be converted into a popular culture arena with art displays, bands, experimental film showings and poetry readings. The proceeds will be donated to an area AIDS organization.

The first annual "Pop Goes the Weasel" festival was organized by Matt Donahue, a University American Culture Studies master's student and lead singer of the band Head, to provide a forum for local popular culture artists.

"That's the reason for the event - to try to get as many creative people together as possible, so people can share ideas and have a good time," he said. "It's all pop art. It's all pop culture."

Donahue said he hopes the event will open up more opportunities for artistic expression in the Toledo area.

"Toledo has been so culturally stifled because it's been so old school. We want to let people know that this is going on out there. We're doing something here," he said. "What we're doing is important and the sub-culture is growing."

Since his purpose was exposure and not profit, Donahue decided to donate the festival's proceeds to David's House, a non-profit Toledo organization for AIDS patients and HIV positive individuals.

"We're very excited that someone would come forward [to organize a benefit]," Larry Harris, director of development for David's House said. "He's put together a phenomenal event."

"It's good that the counter-culture is responding," Harris added. "It's a good reflection of society."

Donahue said he hopes to make the festival an annual event. "If it's successful, I'd like to do another one. I would like to do a yearly event if that's possible."

The various events will take place in three different rooms at the Toledo club. Films will be shown in one room, while bands and poets alternate in another and artwork will be on display throughout the building.

Musicians that will be performing are Vambo Marble Eye, Head, Gone Daddy Finch, Pat Lewandowski, Mickey Stephens and Naked Baby. Artwork by Jim Beard, Matthew Donahue, Bach, Keith Crippen, Gerald Grindstaff, Jim O'Kuley and Chris Shambaugh will be displayed. Denise Miller, Paul Donahue and Kevin Miller will read poetry and Bill Shambaugh will show experimental films.

The Pop Goes the Weasel festival takes place Sun., April 12 from 5:30-12 p.m. at Frankie's, 308 Main St., Toledo and tickets cost $4.

ROCK GOSSIP FROM THE BLACK SWAMP

TELL ME A STORY(TOWN): Chicago's college rock sensation Storytown will be making a return to EasyStreet Cafe tonight and Saturday, bringing their listener-friendly guitar rock sound to anxious BG ears. The 'towns are currently plugging their new 15-song release, Rockfish. They've been compared to the Pretenders and the BoDeans. We'd rather just compare them to a damn good time. The rock-o-rama begins at 10 p.m. Admission is $3 cheap.

FLASH YOUR GROOVE FOR MANDELA: What do Nelson Mandela, Little Sibs Weekend, Groovemaster and Flash Your Buddha have in common? They'll all come together in a frenzy of music this Saturday when BG's reggae gurus Groovemaster and eclectic description-defiers Flash Your Buddha make the rhythms spew forth as part of the annual PSO-sponsored Nelson Mandela Tribute Celebration. Bring your little bro's and sis's to N.E. Commons April 11 at 8 p.m. and experience the magic.

JAMS OF THE WEEK: Record Den manager Jeff DeWitt picked former Replacements drummer Chris Mars solo release Horsehoes and Hand Grenades, on Smash Records. "I really like the Replacements and I don't think a lot of people know he has a solo album out," DeWitt said. MadHatter Music Co. owner Billy Hanway chose BloodMusic by Sub-Pop recording artists Green Magnet School because "It has a good cover." Veronica Sheets, assistant manager of Finder's Records & Tapes chose Sense, the sophomore effort by MCA Records artists the Lightning Seeds. "This is an alternative act and they're getting a lot of airplay," she said.

FROM THE WINDY CITY...Storytown will make the audiences sweat and jam tonight and Saturday at EasyStreet Cafe. Why aren't you there already?

MONDO MANDELA MUSIC...Flash Your Buddha and Groovemaster will both be performing as part of the Mandela Tribute Concert Saturday in the N.E. Commons.

DEF LEPPARD

Def Leppard Adrenalize Mercury

Anybody can make an album about scroggling like a rabbit. Look at the list of metal hacks who can (and do) squeal talentlessly about 'gettin' some': Poison, Warrant, Dangerous Toys, Bon Jovi...and the list goes on. But Def Leppard has always fought that mold and continues to do so with Adrenalize. Screw that glam wimp crap, says Leppard. Instead, they have once again provided us with a hard-rock'n', balls-to-the-wall guitarfest that proves metal doesn't HAVE to be cheese ballads and lipstick.

From the pun-filled sonic blast "Let's Get Rocked" (their apparent to "Pour Some Sugar On Me") to the power riffs of the aggressive-but-not-obnoxious "Tear It Down," Leppard shows a talent for craftsmanship and quality that is sorely lacking in the heavy metal field. Getting mature without getting slow. Rocking hard without peroxide hair or leopard skin spandex. Grab Adrenalize, have your rock cake and eat it, too.

- Matthew A. Daneman
The Mighty Mighty Bosstones
More Noise and Other Disturbances

Taang! Records

This long-awaited release from Boston's madcap Ska boys offers a lot to love - the hard, the fast, and the brass. There doesn't seem to be much change in the band's music and lyrics from their last release (Devil's Night Out), but this group's sound is so completely distinct and likable that it isn't necessary.

The lyrics on Noise range from the socially conscious, "Guns and the Young," to the pains of lost love, "Where'd You Go?," and back again. But as "I'll Drink to That" indicates, these hardcore plaid addicts are fun-lovers, not preachers. The best (of the best) includes "Bad in Plaid," a Bosstones anthem and "They Came to Boston," an angry ode to the tourists and transient college community that constantly invade the group's home.

All catchy, all good, and you just have to move to it. That's the Bosstones.

- Morrellia Raleigh

Storytown Rockfish EGAD! Records

My best car ever was 'Jane,' this VW Rabbit I had in high school. I could slowly cruise around town and have just as much fun as blashtin' down the freeway at 85 or so. Storytown reminds me of that 'mobile. This straight-ahead college rock combo out of Chicago is fast becoming a favorite at EasyStreet Cafe, and for good reason. In the best tradition of Soul Asylum and old R.E.M., Storytown provides enough no-fluffy frills rock to sate any music beast. Now they have their first full-length release to offer, and it'll please both Mario Andretti and the Sunday driver. They troll around town well - especially on such slow jams as "I Didn't Know There Was Anything Wrong" - and can put the pedal to the metal with the best of them. Check the high-octane "Shadow of Your Love," but watch out for Smokey.

- Matthew A. Daneman
Jeffrey Gaines
Jeffrey Gaines
Chrysalis

It's gettin' a wee-bit crowded in the singer-songwriter-guitarist palyten. Quite a few fresh, new, talented faces poppin' up (Tom Cochran, for example), as well as old reliables (two new releases from Springsteen, the John Cougar Melencamp release of the week). To make it in this sandbox, you gotta be pretty good. Gotta stand out.

malist sound kinda recall older Elvis Costello in a mellow mood or Joe Jackson. But Gaines just isn't up to that sort of talent. Whether talking about the special hero trapped in each one of us ("Hero In Me") or the problems of unwanted pregnancy ("Didn't Wanna Be Daddy"), Gaines leaves the listener unsatisfied and slightly bored. Nothing special. Nothing new.

- Matthew A. Daneman

Michelle Shocked Arkansas Traveler Mercury

Michelle Shocked is out there, but that's alright because she's from Texas. Arkansas Traveler is a bit out there itself and even a bit cheesy at times. Not being the type of person that is usually attracted to music that is commonplace on "Austin City Limits" and "Prairie Home Companion," I found the songs on this album a bit tough to enjoy at first, but they soon grew on me like an old friend that moves away when you're a kid and returns to town after growing up. However, a word of warning to the consumer. Don't buy this. Write a letter to Mercury records, tell them you edit a weekly entertainment rag in a Midwest college town and would like to review some albums. It's nice background music, but (in my opinion) not worth the ten or fifteen bucks that could be spent on something better.

- Scott DeKatch
Green Magnet School
BloodMusic
SubPop

Green Magnet School is one of, oh, a million or so Boston bands that are worthy of being heard by just about anyone with a loud stereo and a passion for real rock and roll. If they enjoy/suffer the fate of ex-SubPop bands like Soundgarden and Nirvana, this eclectic quintet just might get heard by the entire world. With three (count 'em - three!) guitarists, Green Magnet School uses both dissonant and melodic harmonies to accent an industrial grunge that shows how sweet it would be if the Replacements grew up in Boston a few years later and really got turned on by the Seattle thing after already being together a while. Four songs on the album are taken right from the band's 1989 demo, and I still think "Windshield" is one of the best rock songs ever (picture Simple Minds with loud guitars and balls).

BloodMusic should be played at high volume on a powerful but beat up stereo. Over and over again.

- Scott DeKatch

The Lightning Seeds Sense MCA

Let's take a flashback to 1990 when The Lightning Seeds hit the big time with its CloudcuckooLand. Their hit song "Pure" saw extensive playing time on radio stations all across the country in addition to the overplay MTV is accustomed to.

Wake up and come back to 1992, where The Lightning Seeds debuted their second album, Sense. Well, if you didn't actually wake up it doesn't matter because you haven't missed too much. Don't get me wrong: The Lightning Seeds have another potentially hot album. However, it seems they didn't try to hard to grow artistically.

The album's lead track, "Sense," seems to be a direct throwback to CloudcuckooLand's "Pure." The same lyrics that say something without actually saying anything seem to be a Lightning Seed trademark. For example, what makes sense to lead singer Ian Broudie? "The only reason is just because. It all makes Sense."

Other songs include "A Cool Place," "Blowing Bubbles," and "Happy" which all have that same sing-along beat with lyrics that just flow from your mouth after a few listens.

This is an excellent follow-up album for fans that don't like their groups to change a lot, and it will find a place in my CD rack for sure.

Generation X

Fear and Loathing in the 'Twenty

by Karen Koster
Insider staff writer

After a tough day at their McJobs, they trek back to their parents' houses under the dark shadow of the Baby Boomer Generation. They think about their futures and are scared to realize that they are in a sense, powerless and paralyzed. They turn their key in the lock and scenes of childhood days and letting themselves into this empty house flash through their minds.

Their personalities were developing during the '70s and '80s - when the Brady Bunch, Watergate and Reagan's infamous "have-it-now" generation were prominent. They wonder how their generation will be remembered and they find no answers. So they are on their own; they must make a name for themselves, create their own identities. But, they are scared, frustrated and even a little angry; what are they going to get out of life and why should they work so hard when they're not progressing anyway? They are members of The Lost Generation, Generation X, The Blank Generation, The twentysomethings.

They are you and me, one of the millions born between 1960 and the early 1970s. We are Generation X and we are just beginning to come to terms with the meaning of that phrase.

"We are the post-[Baby] Boomer generation," Crystal Kile, graduate assistant in the department of popular culture, said. "We are a fragmented generation. We feel that we don't belong anywhere, we're free-floating.

"There is no prevailing style for our generation. Like from 1965 to 1968, you could talk about rock music and you could define the shared experiences of that time."

Similarly, professor of sociology Eldon Snyder concurred: "People in this generation feel kind of powerless in terms of influence in society. They are trying to hold down jobs or go to school or both."

The problems result then when we twentysomethings graduate after four years of college and take our degrees back to our parents' houses, looking for a place to live.

"This is a major cultural trend," said Kile. She explained we do this out of necessity rather than choice because we can't afford to pay rent and we can't find "the job of our dreams."

"This is one reason why so many of us are going straight to grad school after we get our undergraduate degrees," she added.

But where did these feelings of alienation come from and why are we so determined to be recognized?

"Your generation is different because you grew up with things like television and the Reagan '80s," Pam Allen, assistant director of University Placement Services, said. "These are things that the [Baby] Boomers didn't grow up with."

She added that members of the X generation are used to a materialistic, "have-it-now" culture because of the convenience of fast food, one-stop-shopping and our expectations of quick service - which were predominant during our impressionable years.

"Since we were growing up during the '80s - a materialistic generation - the acquisition of status symbols is strong," Kile explained.

"Guess? jeans and J. Crew clothing represented little tags that didn't assume any social standing, but we use them as badges of identification and we're so used to this that it's normal."

Allen stressed, however, that a person's view of materialistic possessions varies. "It's going to be different based on your family background and your upbringing, so it may not be everyone.

"[Researchers] are finding, though, that [members of Generation X] tend to be MORE materialistic than others."

Professor of popular culture Jack Nachbar agreed that X-ers feel discouraged about their futures because of their pasts.

"You are a generation that is learning to be self-reliant because you feel that you can't trust older people," he said. "It's a sense of betrayal because of a high divorce rate among your parents and because you are members of the Latch-Key [generation]."

So while our parents were seeking freedom, we children joined a generation of broken homes and were entering houses with missing parents after school.

Nachbar added that since we were young and impressionable during the Watergate era, we feel a strong sense of distrust for officials. The prevalent philosophy of the X generation is "you now have to rely on yourselves and your own generation," he explained.

Kile stressed that we need to down size and salvage what we've got, but that we are in the midst of an age of diminishing expectations.

"America is no longer the land of opportunity," she said. "This is a contributing factor to the feeling of general malaise."

She also explained that - although we are striving for our goals - we are not reaching them, partly because of the Baby Boomer Generation.

"We are the first generation who is not succeeding in getting what our parents had," she said, "unlike the Baby Boomers who felt that they weren't, but who really were." Kile used national politics as an example:

"It's the Baby Boomers who occupy most of the high offices," Kile explained. "People are beginning to ask where we are in this lineup...and they're not finding us."

As a result of this growing fear among members of our generation, we - the Lost Generation - have adopted three general policies about life.

"You are more street-smart, more socially conscious and you have an inability to commit," Nachbar explained.

He explained that because of our insecurities about the future, we are getting married at an older age than did our parents or members of the Baby Boomer Generation.

Allen agrees and says that she has seen a rebirth of concern over social issues: "Your generation is concerned about the environment and global issues."

Kile agreed, adding, "We as a generation are not out on the streets protesting, but we also don't have anything else to do.

"As a result, volunteer rates are up, especially in organizations like the Peace Corps."

But while a feeling of hopelessness and helplessness still hangs heavy over the heads of the X generation, perhaps we should just realize life does indeed go on.

"I don't think it's in our hands," said Kile. "That's a major part of our outlook. No matter what we do, things are still going to go on as planned."

Allen remains optimistic about our future.

"Many of our students are being offered three or four interviews and many of them are even turning down jobs," she said.

Maybe there is a future for us after all, but the question is, how will we be remembered?

As Kile stated, we are perhaps best described in the Replacement's song "Bastards of Young":

"Nobody wants to claim us. We've got no wars to our name."

A Novel approach to 'Tales for an Accelerated Culture'

by Aggie Colbert
Insider staff writer

Every era has its generation: the "lost generation" of the 1920s, the infamous "Baby Boom" generation, which was spawned during the post-World War II years. Then we came along - the generation previously known only as "twentysomething." The generation without an identity.

That is...until Douglas Coupland's novel Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture (St. Martin's Press, 1991).

Generation X finally gives a definition and an identity to those known as "twentysomething" - those who grew up between the Beatles invasion of the 1960s and the Yuppie invasion of the 1980s. Coupland - himself 29-years-old and from British Columbia - wrote Generation X as the fragmented story of three people - Claire, Dag and Andy - all in their mid- to late-twenties, whose lives have been defined by old T.V. shows, malls and environmentalism.

While the trio tries to escape their fate of forever having low-pay, low-prestige, low-benefit, no-future 'McJobs,' they roam the California desert and try to find meaning in a society that has always just thrown them the leftovers of other eras.

The characters and the situations in the book are eerily parallel to real life: everyone knows an intellectually-deep-acting-yet-shallow-as-a-puddle materialist like Claire. Generation X is as relevant and immediate as outside your door.

Throughout the book, Coupland provides small definitions and sound-bite philosophies of the X generation culture that are - in some ways - more telling than the actual characters and plot of the book. Like Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance or The Tao of Pooh, the book is not so much a story but a philosophy presented in story form.

Sometimes you just have to laugh at yourself, and by writing a book that truthfully describes our generation, Coupland helps us all do that a little more easily.

But can you walk the walk? How to talk like a Baby Buster

- X SPEAK: The language of the Baby Buster Generation.
- MCJOB: A low pay, low prestige, low dignity, low benefit, no future job in the service sector. Frequently considered a satisfying career choice by people who have never held one.
- SURVIVULOUSNESS: The tendency to visualize oneself enjoying being the last remaining person on Earth. "I'd take a helicopter up and throw microwave ovens down on the Taco Bell."
- KNEE-JERK IRONY: The tendency to make flippant ironic comments as a reflexive matter of course in everyday conversation.
- SQUIRES: The most common X generation subgroup and the only subgroup given to breeding. Squires exist almost exclusively in couples and are recognizable by their frantic attempts to recreate a semblance of Eisenhower-era plenitude in their daily lives in the face of exorbitant housing prices and two-job lifestyles. Squires tend to be continually exhausted from their voraciously acquisitive pursuit of furniture and knickknacks.

• BLEEDING PONYTAIL: An elderly, sold-out baby boomer who pines for hippie or pre-sellout days.

• EMOTIONAL KETCHUP BURST: The bottling up of opinions and emotions inside oneself so that they explosively burst forth all at once, shocking and confusing friends and employers - most of whom thought things were fine.

At the movies...

Student filmmaker debuts first feature

by David Huffman
Insider film critic

Every major filmmaker has to start somewhere. Senior film studies major Scott Malchus, the recipient of this year's Lillian and Dorothy Gish Film Studies Scholarship, is getting his start at Bowling Green.

Malchus has just completed his first feature film - entitled The Brass Ring (Les Essais En Amour). The project, started over a year ago, has taken the young writer/director/producer a lot of dedication and hard work to bring to the screen.

The film's story, about a young man looking for the right woman, only to meet with personal obstacles and roommate conflicts, focuses on a "common theme at Bowling Green," according to Malchus.

"Since the seventh grade, I've wanted to be a movie director. This film was the final test to see if I could do it," Malchus said. Thanks to the encouragement of popular culture professor Jack Nachbar and the financial support of Malchus's parents - the film's executive producers - his seventh-grade dream has become reality.

"I did it as a learning experience," Malchus said. But he acknowledges that he did not do it all alone. His director of photography Dean Bianchi, editor Daniel Skrovan and production assistant Joan Thomas all contributed greatly to complete the film project.

Malchus not only makes his debut behind the camera with The Brass Ring, but also cast himself in a cameo role. "Almost everyone I know makes a cameo," he explained.

He said he left most of the acting to his cast - which includes Brody McDonald, Amy Sharp, Todd Meany, Kevin Klever, Brian McCartney and Krista Griffith.

Malchus's The Brass Ring (Les Essais En Amour) will be shown in the Gish Film Theater for free on Saturday, April 11, at 8:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. and again on Friday, April 24, at 8:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

'SCUZE ME WHILE I KISS THE SKY... Wesley Snipes scores in new release White Men Can't Jump.

by Todd Stanley
Insider guest film critic

Ron Shelton's Bull Durham was one of the best movies ever made. The movie revolved around baseball, but focused more on the interesting characters, the sport only serving as the backdrop. Shelton's new film White Men Can't Jump has a very original and interesting concept, but the film depends too much on the sport of basketball and detracts from the interesting characters.

White Men Can't Jump is the story of two con artist basketball players - one white, one black - who try to use the stereotypes of basketball and race in order to make some money. The white basketball player, Billy Hoyle

'White Men... can't touch 'Bull Durham'

(Woody Harrelson) is goofy looking with his Panama Jack shorts and gray socks, but looks can be deceiving and - in his case - they are. He is a lethal outside shooter and passer who out-hustles the king hustler of the courts, Sidney Deane (Wesley Snipes). Sidney sees an opportunity to cash in on Billy's deception and offers Billy a proposition. Sidney will challenge different people to basketball games for large amounts of cash allowing his opponents to pick their partner. Seeing the goofy looking Billy, they naturally pick him as Sidney's partner and Sidney and Billy proceed to win the game and the money.

This works fine at first (if you call having a large man coming after you with a razor fine) but they do end up with the money. The next time, though, doesn't work as well and when Billy must confront his girlfriend with the news that he has lost everything, it is apparent this isn't the first time. We also learn Billy's past and weakness involves owing a lot of money to some gamblers because his competitiveness wouldn't let him throw a college game.

So far, the life off the court is more interesting than life on the court, just as in Bull Durham. Billy's girlfriend Gloria (Rosie Perez) is a trivia freak who reads almanacs by the pound and who's goal it is to go on Jeopardy. When Gloria finally gets on Jeopardy is reminiscent of the Cheers episode when Cliff goes on Jeopardy and all the categories are tailor made for him. The same thing happens here.

Sidney's off-court life involves a wife, Rhonda (Tyra Ferrel), and kiddy trying to get enough money to move out of the neighborhood that they live in. Sidney tries regular jobs such as roofing and construction, but basketball has the biggest payoffs - as well as the being the most fun.

The disappointing thing now is that now that the film has presented us with all these great characters, it goes and focuses on the game of basketball instead. Bull Durham didn't depend on winning any games, but in White Men, two basketball games and a hook shot are what makes the movie move and this is the fatal flaw. Shelton starts to leave the private lives and focus too much on the court life.

The ending is extremely anticlimactic and really isn't much of an ending at all. Throughout the entire movie, too many things are left hanging, unanswered, or just plain not explored enough.

The performances are wonderful - with Snipes turning out yet another great performance. Woody sounds like Woody, but manages to get off a couple of good lines. Rosie Perez picks up Woody's slack though and does a great job. The screenplay is good - but as mentioned before, Shelton should have spent more time off the court. The on-court banter of insults and cut downs is sometimes hard to understand or too fast to catch. Some of them aren't even funny. The basketball games are fast paced and shot well, but when you've seen one game, you've seen them all.

White Men Can't Jump is a well acted and directed film that is bound to entertain quite a few people. But with a better script and a tighter storyline, it could also be a great movie.
